The Rapid Transit Commission was created, not to consider how the existing Elevated Raffroad lines could be extended and improved, but to promote the acquisition of some method of transportation more speedy, more convenient and more helpful to the growth and prosperity of the city than our present by the Commission was therefore in con-Giot with the interests of the Manhattan Elevated Railroad Company, not because it was conceded that the city needs a system that will better meet its interests and necessities.

It was proper for the Commission in performing its work to consider what mprovements or increased privileges on existing railroads would be of public dvantage pending the construction of new lines. But it was a mistake to place on a Commission that could only act officially as a unit two members whose sympathies were wholly the Manhattan corporation, and who would be more likely to obstruct than to promote any rival system. The fallto secure real rapid transit from a Commission so leavened might have been foressen, and was, indeed, manifost from the first.

This is worked solidly in smooth satin stitch with wo threads of white floselle. Use one thread of golden yellow slik for outlining the whole design, with the same for stem work or for feather edge around the circle. These designs are suitable also for silk or veivet to use under vases or bric-a-brac. Fine twisted silk a used for the embroidery, with gold thread for stems; or, if a more elegant effect is desired, bullion and gold thread may be used with good effect. This makes a pretty accompaniment to a handsome vase or a Christmas gift—the mat to be of heavy silk. The delicate colors of the vase may be carried out in the coloring of the design. Baked Peach Pudding.

Boll one-half cup of rice until tender in plenty of boiling salted water; drain. Put in farina boiled with one cup of peach juice. Cook until the juice is nearly or quite absorbed, then stir into the sugar is dissolved. Grease a pud-

Angel's Food. The holes in a tender angel's food are usually caused by the melting and cake is baking. If the cake were tough would probably be in the beating of the eggs. It will be tough and leathery unless the whites are sufficiently firm to bear an egg and the texture firm and fine grained. Try mixing the angel's food in the following manners Put the sifted sugar (be sure it is sifted) in the bottom of the the whites and begin to stir, adding the flour gradually as usual. In this way the cake is mixed far quicker.

Household Hints.

A gargle of hot claret often affords much relief in cases of soute sore throat. Some housekeepers serve lemon with muston, but most people prefer a combination of tart and sweet, as in mint sauce or truit jeilies.
